

The following is a list of the names of the persons who died of yellow fever the last autumn. It was laboriously and carefully prepared for the New-Orleans Evening Post from the official orders sent with each body to the cemeteries. The Editor of that Journal thus introduced the list :

No one unacquainted with the difficulty of getting up statistical accounts of this character can form an adequate idea of the trouble of the task. The superintendents of the several cemeteries were very obliging and did all they could to put us in possession of the documents in their keeping. The greatest difficulty occurs in the orthography of the names communicated by numerous physicians, often in almost illegible characters, to the Board of Health, and to the municipal authorities. Where the books of the cemeteries were not posted up to date, permission was generously granted us at the Mayor's office to refer to the original orders for burial and to other sources of information.—THE RECORD OF THE DEAD, is now as perfect as it is in our power to make it.
